

Rose Anyiko Ingutia
Stipendieforskare, gästforskare, forskardoktor
Avdelningen för ekonomi
Avdelningen för ekonomi
Avdelningen för ekonomi
Avdelningen för ekonomi
Agricultural Economics
Postadress:
Finland
E-post: rose.ingutia@gmail.com, rose.ingutia@helsinki.fi

Forskningsintressen

Rose Ingutia is a university researcher, who has a PhD in Agricultural Economics from the University of Helsinki, Finland. Licentiate degree in Economics from the University of Helsinki. Her expertise includes child poverty, rural women, food security, nutrition, sustainable management of natural resources, water management, smallholder productivity, cooperatives, rural livelihoods, rural development, institutional economics, marginalisation in education, youth job skills, economic growth, and econometrics.

Her great passion for improving the well-being of rural communities has led to a deep quest to find solutions to improve their livelihoods by focusing on agricultural issues since agriculture is the lifeline and mainstay of most rural communities. Founder of Vocori.org, our vision is to relieve suffering and restore human dignity by empowering poor children to access basic services to safeguard our societies from collapsing.